Many celebrate the third annual Michigan Adoption Day

(Marshall, November 22, 2005, 4:47 p.m.) For the third year, Michigan celebrated its Adoption Day on Tuesday.

In order to celebrate children in Michigan's adoption program, a judge in Marshall finalized those in foster care to getting legally adopted.

It was a joyous occasion for the families, the court and local adoption agencies.

"There's a lot of rewards from it...to know that you can change someone's life to give them something that they don't have. Anything that I've been through is no comparison to what these children have been through. They need the love, they need a home, they need more than you know," said Duane Seymour, a new adoption parent.

Seymour said it's a life changing experience, and that if you are considering adoption and don't know to just do it.
